

'Praying for the dead is, above all, a sign of gratitude for the witness they have left us, and the good they have done. It is a thanksgiving to the Lord for them and for their love and their friendship. At the same time, remembering the dead should not make us forget to pray for the living too, who experience life's trials along with us. The communion of saints, in fact, indicates that we are all immersed in the life of God and live in his love. Everyone, living and dead, are in communion; that is, we are all united! In union, united in the community of those who have been baptised, and those who have been nourished by the body of Christ and are part of the great family of God. We are all the same family—united. And we pray for each other. How many different ways there are to pray for our neighbour! They are all valid and acceptable to God if done with the heart. I think especially of mothers and fathers who bless their children in the morning and at night—there is still this habit in some families, blessing your child is a prayer; I think of the prayer for the sick, when we go to visit them and pray for them; silent intercession, sometimes with tears in many difficult situations. We pray for this difficult situation.'
